'Virtual Race' Carries on 50-Year Legacy

Mattapoisett Road Race

By Mick Colageo

While it was disappointing for many to come to find out there would be no 50th running of the Mattapoisett Road Race this year, it turns out there were actually two races.

The official "virtual" one, in which runners were only competing against themselves on a self-chosen course with an assignment to turn in a time solely for verification purposes, is not alone as multiple waves of runners descended on Main Street around 8:45 am on July 4 for their own unofficial run.

Race Director Bill Tilden intended the virtual event to ensure safe-distancing guidelines and, at the same time, use entry fees to support Old Rochester Regional High School's Class of 2020.

"We just wanted people to get out there and get their five miles in for our (ORR) seniors. It was more of a 'Thank You back' just so we could give out some scholarships to seniors," said Tilden. "But we used up everything not knowing (about the coronavirus pandemic)... We didn't have a whole lot of money in the kitty after we purchased the shirts this year."

Last year, approximately $20,000 was raised based on the race's typical field around 1,000 competitors. This year over 300 registered for the virtual run. Unlike many road races, the Mattapoisett Road Race has been content at 1,000.

"That's where we always liked it to be," said Tilden. "That's why we've never been big on the advertising end. We want to be that fun group that just wants to have a barbecue and a beer."

That homey flavor has served the Mattapoisett Road Race quite well going back to its 1971 origin when the Bob Gardner spearheaded barely over a dozen participants. The late founder of the race was honored on July 4 with a plaque at the starting line.

Gardner was an assistant principal at ORR Regional High School, then stepped in as the first principal at the then-new ORR Junior High. "He was very involved in the community, big into putting time into causes," said Tilden, the ORR director of athletics who has been involved on the race committee the past 16 years including his 10th year as race director. "We will do a rededication next year in front of thousands."

The virtual race has been happening all over the United States, on hills, in suburbs, on beaches and on treadmills.

Originally scheduled to be run between June 26 and July 2, event t-shirts will no longer be available for the virtual race, but Tilden never closed down its donation deadline so participants can still enter and run to help support scholarships for ORR 2020 graduates.

The grand irony is July 4th tends to be scorching heat in Mattapoisett. This year "would probably be our coolest race day," according to Tilden. "It was funny this year because the Fairhaven (Father's Day) race has always been a hot one; it was 65 (degrees Fahrenheit) for race

On the Cover: Many neighbors and friends have been asking about the Barbies. Due to virus concerns, we made a conscious decision not to create the display this year since it draws so many visitors of all ages to congregate near our gate. Instead, the Barbies are observing Social Distancing with masks on, as this photo taken on the 4th reveals. We hope that the full crew will be out next year. - Teresa Dall time for them, too. The last couple of years we'd be very nervous with 1,800 bottles of water for 1,000 runners."

A half-century ago, all road races in the U.S. were being measured in miles, and when 5 and 10-kilometer races began popping in the early 1980s, Mattapoisett chose to keep its identity intact as the area's 5 miler.

Tilden is happy to do his part to keep the Mattapoisett Road Race's legacy intact, both in terms of its traditions and its ongoing mission. While the t-shirts won't be going out all summer, the post-entry race deadline has remained open so that interested runner can still donate to the cause and help add another year of student assistance.

In 2019, the Mattapoisett Road Race distributed $20,000 in college stipends, and over the past decade has topped $135,000 in awards to local high school seniors.

DiCarlo Shy upon Recognition, Relentless in Her Mission

By Marilou Newell

Elizabeth "Liz" DiCarlo has been advocating for people on multiple fronts for more than 40 years. That statement of fact recently put DiCarlo in a special category of women from Massachusetts – she was named as a Commonwealth Heroine by the Massachusetts Commission on the Status of Women.

Her name was advanced by State Representative Antonio Cabral of the 13th Bristol District.

Noted in DiCarlo's biography posted on Mass.gov, Cabral gave a long list of her service achievements such as working with populations from Central America, HIV/AIDS education for at-risk people, affordable-housing issues, and efforts to mitigate discrimination faced by LGBTQ people. She is without a doubt the ultimate people-person.

When The Wanderer caught up with DiCarlo, she softly said of all the recognition she has been receiving, "…it's a little embarrassing." Yet DiCarlo speaks strongly and very clearly when it comes to the issues she believes in fighting for, namely helping those who may be the last to receive services. And while she claims to be retired, it was quite clear her work is far from over.

"I'm working with the Democratic Town Committee," she said of her ongoing work on voter registration so that, "people can vote for those who represent them and their interests."

After graduating from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in the 1970s, DiCarlo became a nurse working as a public health sector. She is originally from Newton but moved to the New Bedford area after graduating. Her family built a home in Mattapoisett around 1975. "I was very happy about that!" she said.

New Bedford became her base from which she began work organizing labor-union groups and immersing herself in multi-cultural neighborhoods. "I love the richness, the diversity of cultures," she said. "New Bedford has people from Cape Verde, the Caribbean, Latin America, Ireland, France – there have been waves of immigration through the centuries." She said her work over the years has focused on identifying where need exists and then finding the ways and means to serve the people.

One need that DiCarlo identified as growing in urgency is affordable housing. "The next generation can't afford to live in Mattapoisett," she stated and explained that the rising cost of owning or even renting properties is impacting young and old alike. "Our seniors want to downsize and live in Mattapoisett, but where?"

DiCarlo said it is time to think about different types of housing stock and shared her hope that Mattapoisett's updated Master Plan, currently under review by the Planning Board and other committees with the assistance of SRPEDD, will help in finding new ways to solve old problems – keeping a roof over heads. She expressed concern that if Mattapoisett doesn't take a proactive approach to affordable housing, "Someone will come in and do it."

Systems, process analysis, data collection, and assessment are some of the cornerstones of public nursing, and DiCarlo has thrown her talents to all of those through the years.

On Cape Cod, DiCarlo was hired as a consultant to bring together a network of agencies and community centers for a needs assessment of the 15 towns that comprise the peninsula. "There are growing Latino, Caribbean, and Brazilian communities on the Cape," she said, the goal being to understand how well the people can access healthcare services. To her surprise, 1,000 households participated, not hesitating to share their data. She had deployed 200 volunteers in the effort. "There were four languages to take into consideration," she said, "The response was fabulous." The data from the surveys pointed to the need for culturally competent care and interpretation services.

With pride, DiCarlo said that this project inspired the development of dental services for immigrant populations throughout the Cape. "We found that there was a major issue for these people in accessing dental care." The development of "dental operatories," locations and services made available to those without insurance or the means to pay for services, bloomed. "We developed partnerships with Cape Cod Regional Vocational High School in Harwich and Cape Cod Community College to provide oral health services." That program reached out across Buzzards Bay to Martha's Vineyard as well.

More recently, DiCarlo's work has focused on getting out the vote. "We want people to come out and vote their values." From a regional standpoint, she said a strong effort had been made in networking for social justice including LGBTQ platforms, but that it is important to increase the dialogue and understanding that voting matters. "Having an up-to-date voter registration is critical."

DiCarlo has been involved in school-based, voter-registration drives and placing visual reminders around

New Bedford and the surrounding area that display dates of elections. "We need people to think about what is important to them; in the larger cities, you have to find ways of reaching people… But this isn't new stuff," she added with a chuckle. "We've been doing this since the Rainbow Coalition, personal empowerment, and political empowerment."

HIV/AIDS, health education, and the role of public health nursing are also part of DiCarlo's early work. "We engaged with communities to assess their assets and identify their limitations to come up with opportunities," she said. "We had candid discussions about how to be safe; it's not just giving out information but in having those explicit conversations about sexual practices and drugs." She said providing health care was also part of the program, "so people could get the care that they needed."

Given the current pandemic, DiCarlo believes, "It's not enough to give education, systems have to be in place to help the victims." She said the Southcoast region has done a good job reaching businesses to ensure that distancing and face coverings are used in the workplace.

While talking about workers her thoughts turned to their homelives. "Lots of family members may live in a small apartment. We need to educate the children, make sure food resources are readily available, and think about how they will care for one another to prevent the spread of COVID," she said. "Half of New Bedford is Latino. They live in dense situations. If we are looking at the data, we need to make sure educational opportunities are there."

That whole-systems approach is the hallmark of a public health professional or, as DiCarlo framed it, "All things are possible with honest collaboration, dignity and respect."

A newly-minted Bourne resident nearing age 64, Briand was only a 13-year-old summer resident of Mattapoisett when he ran the inaugural race in 1971. Having grown up in Taunton and attending Coyle High School where he ran cross country and track, the Mattapoisett Road Race was a perfect offseason event, smack dab in the middle of summer.

He finished at 32:11 in the second Mattapoisett Road Race in 1972 to win the Junior category.

"It is amazing how it took off. It didn't take very long," said Briand, noting that the race grew from barely beyond a dozen the first year to about 25 the second, then to 300 within a few years.

Briand, who ran at the University of Rhode Island before beginning a successful career in finance, attributed the fast growth of the race to the "running boom in the '70s and '80s."

He didn't set out to run the race every year as much as he set out to win it, which he never did.

"I finished second a couple of times, I never won it. I suppose that kept me coming back for more," said Briand, who used to run road races throughout Massachusetts and Rhode Island. "When I was no longer a threat to win it, I figured I might as well keep going... Five miles is always a little hard for me; 5k's are a little more manageable."

A staple of the race, Briand was known by many and got to know many others, including the late Dave Jenney whom Briand remembers as a "darn good runner."

As a humorous example of the manner in which the Mattapoisett Road Race grew on its participants, Briand recalled the story of Jenney's European vacation.

"He and his wife were in choral group headed to Europe for three weeks, and... he says to his wife, 'What do you think if I flew back?'" said Briand, laughing at the memory. Janney did not, but years later would confess, "I wish I had."

It was no surprise that Briand signed up for the 2020 virtual race, thereby extending his streak from the event's 1971 start. But motivation to continue is as clear as watching his son Patrick, a 2016 ORR and 2020 Bentley University graduate, join in the fun.

"It is a shame those seniors in (ORR) high school got beat out of their graduation, their prom and spring sports. It was nice we could do something," said Briand, who attended the Saturday morning ceremony honoring late race founder Bob Gardner with a plaque, appropriately arriving at the end of his Saturday morning run.

Briand loves the event and plans to keep racing.

"As long as I'm healthy – I'm 63 – I hope I've got another 10 or 12 in me," he said.

Volunteers Still Driving Force on Fourth

Mattapoisett Road Race

By Mick Colageo

Great projects are rarely conceived according to the first draft and sometimes it takes a broken play to score a touchdown, but the volunteers who make the Mattapoisett Road Race what it's become over a half-century have one thing in common: an ethic borne of passion for athleticism, their community and the Old Rochester Regional High School graduates who gain opportunities from the funds raised by the annual race.

On this July 4, that army of familiar faces was not prevalent after the coronavirus pandemic leveraged the 50th anniversary running into a virtual event with remote participation (see adjacent article). But the many friendly helpers who have marshaled the race from its 1971 genesis to this day and beyond are no less relevant.

The countless hours of effort it takes in so many facets to plan for, guide, and protect a typical field of 1,000 competitors will always need more members, and The Wanderer asked Danny White to help us recognize some of those people behind the scenes.

White was a college student when he got involved in the Mattapoisett Road Race. Much more recently (1998), he tried with Steve Heath to form an alumni group for ORR graduates and organized a couple of fundraisers.

"It didn't make it like the one we have right now," said White. "We didn't have the 503(c non-profit application) set up properly. Every time we tried to raise money, we ended up causing more trouble."

That's when race founder Bob Gardner, along with fellow originals Carl Nelson and Gerry Oliva, approached White and Heath and asked them if they would be interested in taking over the road race "because we'd fit right in," recalled White.

Oliva, the ORR football coach, taught social studies and history at the high school.

As White tells, Gardner had already approached the Lions Club, but the race's primary fundraising interest in scholarships for ORR graduates did not mesh with the Lions Club's mission to allocate 80 percent of proceeds to Lions Club charities.

"Bob didn't like that idea, he always wanted 100 percent to go back into scholarships for ORR students," said White. "He said, 'No thank you, that's not what we're looking for.'"

Gardner didn't leave the race-organization team, but Dan and Holly White were suddenly neck deep for the next 11 years. Holly only recently stepped down "because she was doing everything," according to Dan. "There was a lot of paperwork involved, and she was pretty much doing it by herself."

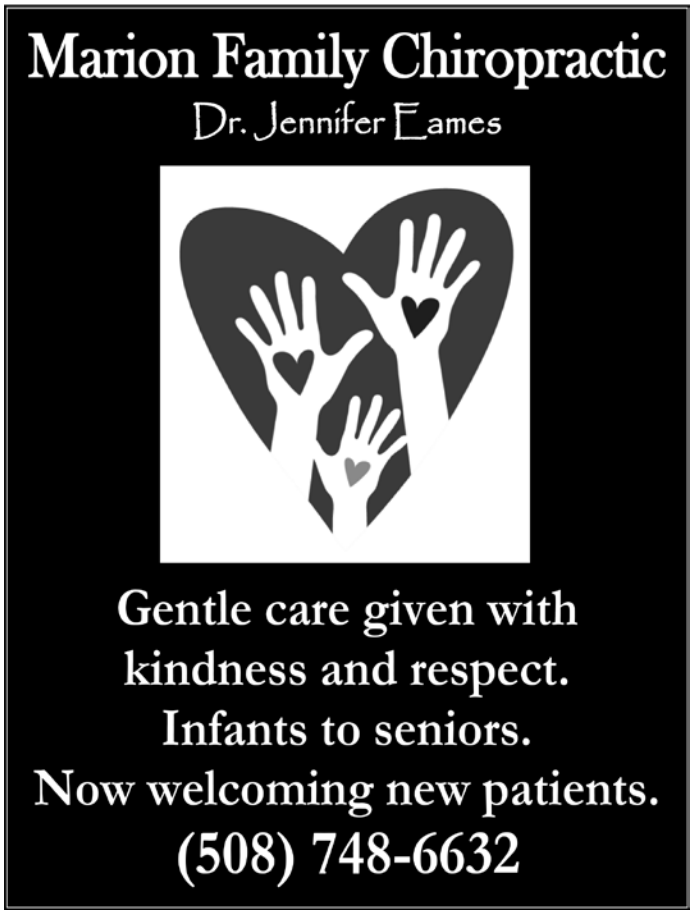

Dan has stayed on in recent years to assist Race Director Bill Tilden as "race course director." It has remained his mission to go knocking on the doors of the people who normally manage the street corners along the course.

White considers the volunteerism of Barry and Susan Perkins legendary.

The Perkins meet the runners in three locations, running their own race to be in the right spot in time to move barriers and direct runners. "They would come down North Street and turn up Church Street – Barry would place a barrier against the (vehicular) traffic. Then they would meet them at Hammond Street, then as runners passed by North Street," recounted White.

From the early days on, Gardner's neighbors have tossed their hats into the ring.

Along with accepting race-day registrations, Karen and David Manning worked the night before the race, distributing t-shirts just as Betty Oliva, Gerry's wife, had done back in the day. White was thrilled that the Mannings came back from North Carolina for Saturday morning's dedication of the plaque honoring the late Bob Gardner.

The time-honored tradition of t-shirt ordering was picked up by Caty Fuerman, who volunteers with her husband, Dr. David Fuerman.

Joanne O'Day, another Gardner neighbor, walked up to Oakland Street where runners cross from Old Marion Road and Shipyard Lane toward the waterfront. There, she made sure the runners turned onto the correct path for the final push.

Gardner neighbor Donald Linhares would tell Dan, "Give me two or three cones, I'll take care of the rest," and the Oxford Creamery area would be properly marked.

Eddie Walsh and Kenny Taft put out the cones to establish running lanes to and from the lighthouse, making sure the competitors coming and going did not cross one another's paths.

"The runners would go through Tupelo Lane, wind through there, then Ned's Point Road across the street from the boatyard," said White. "There was always somebody who would turn all the runners that (had already gone two miles)."

As masses of runners approach Ned's Point, they are greeted by posted signs cautioning boat launchers that from 9-11 am on July 4, to expect to be stuck in the parking lot.

Providing a truck and two members of the staff, the Fire Department always follows the last runner. The Mattapoisett Police is at the ready with an ambulance in the event of injury or heat exhaustion.

"My job was to keep the course safe," said White, who received a major assist from Barry Denham, the painter of the start and finish lines. "Barry was automatic, he would make sure that was done. Bob and I did the mile markers."

Along with dumpsters, Denham provided cones, orange barrels and A-frame barriers that come in handy especially at the Church Street extension and the twists and turns up Tupelo Lane.

What did volunteers get for their part? "We'd give them a t-shirt," said White.

It was a token, albeit small, of an effort greatly appreciated and one that can never be paid back.

race over the last 10-15 years, according to White.

According to White, Rory McFee always took a group of students from the ORR track club down to the lighthouse to man two water stops. A junior high teacher who worked under Gardner, McFee gave the kids t-shirts and cups of water to keep them hydrated.

"And we picked up after ourselves," said White. "By 12 o'clock you wouldn't have known anyone was there. Everybody helped."

Mike Esposito and his family always had a water table on Ned's Point Road. So did Teresa Dahl, a history teacher at ORR.

White said that regular volunteers Ben and Lauralee Handel could not make it back this year due to the risks of travel during the pandemic.

In the early days of the race when Gardner led from a golf cart driven by Shawn Walsh, runners lined up at Ned's Point. Not far away, Dean Doran pointed his miniature cannon into Buzzards Bay and shot a blank. That way, White explained, the volunteers at the finish line knew when to start their stopwatches.

Timekeeping has progressed over the years.

Steve and Merri Heath, for 30 years regular volunteers, started and maintained the race clock located at the 1-mile marker on Church Street. Runners could also see the clock approaching the 4- mile mark.

John Braun, co-founder of the Acushnet Road Race and JB's Road Race Management, handled the official timing for 30 years. Now a much larger company called Racewire handles the timing, but the local volunteers remain at the heart of the Mattapoisett Road Race.

"Next year, the day before the race, we're going to recognize these people at the wharf," said White. "It's tough to do the day of the race because they're manning their posts."

harborside, but for the few that witnessed the launching of the new harbormaster's boat July 4 was still a day for celebrations.

Previously requested by former Harbormaster Jill Simmons and supported by new harbormaster Jamie McIntosh as a necessity, the new boat represents the town's commitment to safety in the deep harbor of Mattapoisett for residents and visitors alike. The new boat is a Stanley Bullnose with 250 horsepower, twin, outboard engines measuring 28 feet by 10 feet and features removal panels and drop-down side doors for ease in hauling accident victims or large items from the water.

The older boat, a Sea Hawk, was described as being primarily designed for fishing activities versus water rescues or law-enforcement needs. That boat was sold to help offset the costs of the new boat.

During a February 2019 meeting of the Board of Selectmen, the board voted to appropriate $75,000 as a down payment contingent upon a positive vote demonstrating support by the Marine Advisory Board. The MAB voted in the affirmative. The total estimated price of the new boat is $150,000, according to McIntosh.

Earlier in the process of lobbying for a new boat, McIntosh met with the BOS on October 9, 2019. While the meeting covered a variety of waterfront-enterprise issues, a new boat was a primary topic. McIntosh explained that a new boat is needed to more efficiently handle the type of work and emergency activities encountered out on the water.

McIntosh said that after meeting with the Marine

Advisory Board it was clear that issues around enforcing rules and regulations would be better served with more eyes out on the water during peak seasons and an "all hands on deck" approach. He noted that the prior boat was inefficient for most of the work typically done by his department, including pulling people out of the water. McIntosh said that Marion has a boat comparable to what Mattapoisett now has and that made him familiar with the new craft's serviceability. He said that, with the significant type of weather Buzzards Bay is known for, twin engines are a must for power and back-up in the event one engine becomes disabled.

Then-Town Administrator Mike Gagne commented that, should a new boat be considered, the plan would also include selling the current harbormaster boat, a Sea Hawk, as well as a small Whaler.

At that time, Selectman Jordan Collyer said, "The boat is justified. We could take a five-year note for the boat," but also added that costs associated with a new boat could be "lumped together" with wharf repairs into a larger 10-year bond. Collyer also stated that it was reasonable to spread the cost of a new boat across financing sources, not just born fully by boaters because, "Everyone uses the harbor."

At Saturday's unveiling, Collyer said, "It's been a long time coming… it will serve the community for a long time." Also on hand was Selectman Paul Silva who commented, "This is long overdue. I fully support it.

Boating isn't like 20 years ago; there's a lot more activity out there."

McIntosh expressed his sincere appreciation for support from town meeting and the boating community with a special shout-out to Lt. Ross Macedo for his expertise in wiring the boat and with electronics installation. He said that in order to be able to launch the boat on July 4, his team and others who assisted worked late into the night as well as working double shifts for nearly two weeks. In concluding his comments, McIntosh said, "I'm honored to be a part of this department and this day."

Arts Have Ally in Cultural Council

By Mick Colageo

After watching an excellent television program on the public broadcasting station, a viewer might sit and watch the credits roll. Somewhere near the bottom, it says the program was made possible by... any number of charitable agencies, endowments or entities.

When it comes to the wide variety of locally-based or locally beneficial arts events and projects, the Rochester Cultural Council is such an agency.

Established in 1998, the council is made up of several members appointed to three-year terms by the Board of Selectmen with the mission to serve as a clearinghouse or judgment committee for applicants seeking funding from the state.

The Massachusetts Cultural Council decides the amount allocated to each town, then that local affiliate deliberates over each application, and upon a majority vote makes the awards. Rochester expects an annual allocation of approximately $5,000. Award amounts generally range between $200 and $600 and are distributed by town administration in keeping with the local Cultural Council's determinations.

"If the project or the event is going to be most beneficial to the age groups in the Rochester and surrounding areas as well including New Bedford and all over, as a group we decide how many people will be able to partake, benefit from whatever that project is. And that gives weight to how much we award them," said

Rochester Cultural Council member Nancy Sparklin. "In each application, they list what else they've applied to... that also comes into play."

And in a positive manner, says the council, which is not likely to reject an application because they are barking up other trees and may not need the funding as much as an applicant with all its eggs in one basket. The council sees aggressive fundraising as ambition.

"The Rochester Cultural Council's priority is to benefit the people in Rochester," said Chairperson Randall Elgin. "One of the first things (we ask) will be, 'Will the people in Rochester enjoy it?' It might happen in the Tri-Town area. The symphonic band, New Bedford Symphony comes to Rochester and goes right into the schools so we support that."

People across the region have gotten to know Vinny Lovegrove and the Toe Jam Puppet Band in part thanks to the Rochester Cultural Council.

Member Sue Kowalski said in an email that the council interacts with a great group of people, those who organize and run events and are willing to volunteer their time and effort to present something that benefits their community but lack the means to make it happen without funding.

"We have the benefit of being able to help them realize their goal and it is generally a very positive experience all around," she said.

Kowalski said it's important that people know the wide variety of events or projects that the Rochester Cultural Councils supports, including music, arts, and sciences. "Weather stations, anything to do with science we actually fund, and also the age groups from school-age kids to seniors… Sometimes sponsoring a senior group going to the Boston art museums and they need some funding. We consider that a worthwhile event."

Kowalski said that last year the Rochester Cultural Council received 25 applications for 2020 projects and made 21 awards, noting that the council strives for fairness and an effort to spread the money equitably and as broadly as possible.

The Rochester Cultural Council is a member of the Massachusetts Cultural Council, the coordinated mission being "to promote excellence, access, education and diversity in the arts, humanities, and sciences, in order to improve the quality of life for all Massachusetts residents and to contribute to the economic vitality of our communities."

As is the case with other towns' cultural councils, members discuss each application, seek a consensus, then vote – a majority rules.

"That's the state-handed process," said Sparklin, noting that applications are made online through the Massachusetts Cultural Council.

It's been a strange year for the Rochester Cultural Council with so many events and programs hanging in the balance due to state guidelines and restrictions related to the COVID-19 pandemic.

"We had a handful of people who managed to get their programs in before the end of March, and then there are virtual (events and programs). Some are waiting, especially the ones that are going to be outdoor gatherings," explained Kowalski, noting that the Onset Chalk-fest was canceled. "The Massachusetts Cultural Council certainly understands the COVID issue, and are giving the 2020 grantees until 2021 to use the money. They can also apply for 2021 if they so need. They all got their checks done."

"Massachusetts Cultural Council has been very proactive in coming forth with guidelines in how to handle the COVID-19 situation, and all the cultural councils are supportive," said Elgin.

The Rochester Cultural Council has begun advertising and press releases and will accept applications from September 15 to October 15. By December 30, the council will have made its decisions and announce who has won the awards.

The council is also interested in gaining new members. For more information, email rochesterculturalcouncil@gmail.com or visit townofrochestermass.com/culturalcouncil.html.

My dog has had some back issues and my veterinarian suggested acupuncture. Does it really work?

Acupuncture can help with a multitude of different medical issues from arthritis to seizures. It works by placing small needle into specific points on your pets body. They redirect the body's energy and may cause the release of endorphins, which help the relief of pain. Acupuncture is not a procedure that works immediately. It may take time to see improvement, but the benefits can be substantial and long lasting.

that led to legal action, the Rochester Conservation Commission affirmed the work done by Michael Oliver to restore his mistakes at 1009 Walnut Plain Road by approving his Notice of Intent during the commission's remote access, public hearing on Tuesday night.

The Conservation Commission had issued an Enforcement Order in February after Oliver had illegally cut down over 3,000 square feet of vegetation within a pond and 25 foot "no-disturb zone."

"We had been utilizing counsel because the deadline date on the Enforcement Order had been surpassed," with no communication, said Conservation Agent Laurell Farinon. "It was unbeknownst to us that (Oliver) had been hospitalized for eight weeks. We're happy to know he is on the mend and getting stronger."

Oliver's representative, Cameron Larson of ECR Environmental Consulting and Restoration, told the commission that ECR in conjunction with Merrill Engineers will complete the restoration. Larson presented photos reflecting that the remaining stumps are already sprouting, and summarized a plan to plant saplings, shrubs, and trees until 75 percent coverage is restored. He also proposed two years of monitoring and reporting to ConCom after full growing seasons for two consecutive years.

Larson stressed that Oliver didn't realize he was cutting illegally and is fully cooperative with ConCom's directives.

"Thanks to Mr. Oliver for going forward," said ConCom member Maggie Payne. "I think it's always unfortunate when people don't know the rules and we wind up here. But thanks for that."

Member Christopher Gerrior told Larson that, "A lot of the business we do is people coming back to us and wanting to remove things other people put there." Gerrior advised against white pines and suggested red cedars instead.

The commission voted to authorize Farinon to write a cover letter with the decision requesting red cedars. The hearing was closed when Larson popped back on to say he intended to comply with the commission's wishes, but Chairman Michael Conway reminded him the vote was to approve the Notice of Intent as stated.

A continuance was granted to July 21 to Wareham-based SEMASS Partnership for property located at 141 Cranberry Highway. The applicant proposes the removal of 125 trees to mitigate imminent hazard to approximately 1,500 linear feet of overhead utility lines.

In the public hearing continued from June 16, Paul Shamoian of Raynham-based Civil and Environmental Consultants, Inc. represented SEMASS and presented a historical sketch in which 51 trees were cut in March, leaving stumps in place and hundreds more trimmed, most of which are inside the 25-foot "no-touch" wetlands buffer zone.

With seasonal growth threatening the overhead lines once again, ConCom requested in a May hearing that more permanent work be done to address long-term concerns. On July 7, SEMASS submitted a Notice of Intent to remove the remaining 125 trees, leaving their stumps in place. Shamoian said the trees were all pines and nothing native would be removed from the buffer zone. All work would be completed with bucket trucks reaching over the banks and be staged on the pavement outside the buffer zone.

Payne recommended that SEMASS avoids cutting during the April to August nesting season.

Conway expressed frustration with the lack of a maintenance plan after two prior requests and said he did not want to vote until he finally sees it.

Farinon credited SEMASS for work done so far. "As Mr. Shamoian stated, the permit is good for three years," she said. "This is not a small undertaking. This main access road is the lifeline to their facility... I think that it's a good proposal; it's what the Conservation Commission wanted to see."

A Positive Order of Conditions was issued to Brandon Dion for property located at 13 Bradford Lane with stipulations including a meeting with site review prior to any construction. Dion has proposed a 25-by-26-foot garage with a new eight-foot mudroom, porch, and a new 10-by-15.5 foot extension of an existing wood deck. There is also a CULTEC chamber system to handle roof runoff.

Decas Cranberry Company was issued a Certificate of Compliance for work completed on Old Middleboro Road. Farinon described it as a wetland restoration plan from a few years ago on a 25-acre property with a westerly bordering vegetated wetland and an isolation wetland. "Everything looks in great shape; it's come in nicely and enhances that area," she said.

ConCom also voted to accept the order of wetlands-area resource delineation as set forth by Claire Hoogeboom of Plymouth-based LEC Environmental Consultants, Inc. on behalf of William Clapp, 52 Clapp Road.

In a public hearing continued from June 2, a Notice of Intent filed by Dartmouth-based Steen Realty and Development Corp. for properties located at 22 Cranberry Highway was continued per the applicant's request to July 21 while awaiting a decision from the Planning Board and a site review by Henry Nover.

Green Darnier Dragonfly Proven More Friend than Foe

By George B. Emmons

If you live near the standing-water shoreline as we do on Little Bay in Fairhaven, our midsummer evenings on the back porch are filled with watching fleeting dragonflies and damselflies streaking back and forth to catch mosquitos in midair.

In New England alone, there are no less than four indigenous species of them that prevail along waterside shorelines of both salt and freshwater inlets of bays, lakes and ponds. The largest of them is the Green Darnier variety, as illustrated, about to eat a mosquito it has caught.

Mosquitos are their favorite prey, making the Green Darnier Dragonfly even more beneficial than ever in eliminating the possibility of the former infecting human beings with diseases that can be windblown like the new coronavirus that is so contagious.

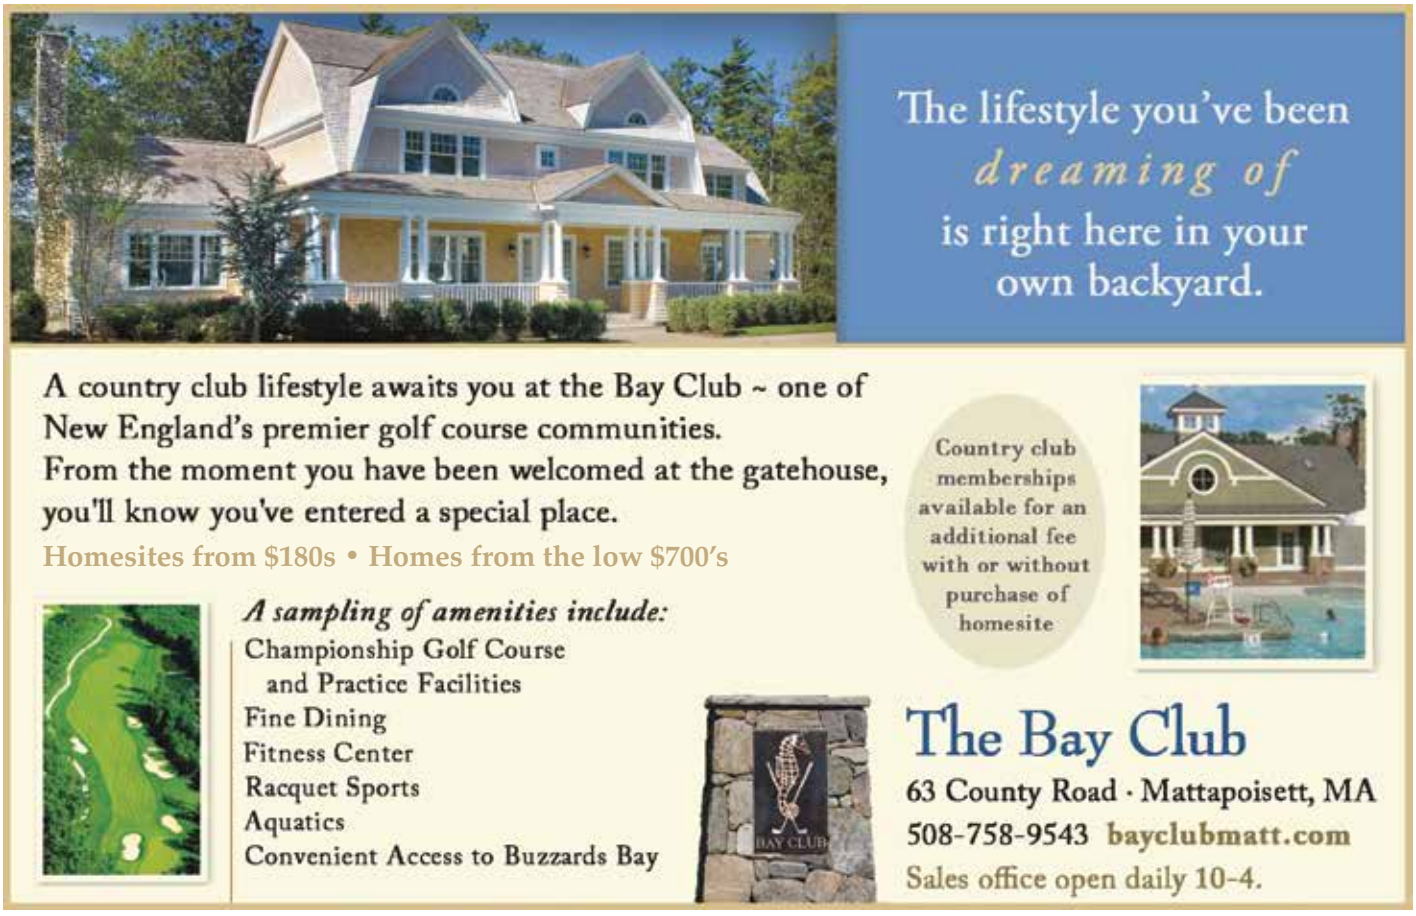

All dragonflies have four wings, as shown in the illustration. These wings can be folded back or slanted in pitch to quickly fly in any one of six different directions. They move quickly, back and forth like a darning needle, which is another name for them. They also appear together mating in flight, one on the other piggyback for propagation. This appearance is used by Amish farmers to warn their children not to tell lies, or else their lips might be sewn together by what they called the "devil's dragonfly." After mating, the female will lay several thousand fertilized eggs on or near the surface of the water, attached to a split-leaf or plant just below the surface.

The eggs will, in about a week, hatch out to become aquatic nymphs called larvae, unless water-purity conditions are less than favorable. Usually a good part of a dragonfly's life is initially underwater unless spraying of insecticides sterilizes them from hatching. In Rachael Carson's book, Silent Spring, the spraying can be just as detrimental to their hatching as bird eggs for mosquito control. Actually, just the opposite can be very beneficial by the method of supplying hundreds of thousands of dragonfly larvae to areas of standing water in communities usually infested with mosquitos. To recommend using this unlikely creature for beneficial results is truly remarkable.

Fossils of the dragonfly date back some 300 million years on Earth, and are found subsequently on every continent in the world. How they got the mythical title of a dragon may be due to their resemblance of mythical, fearsome monsters during the age of dinosaurs. In Japan, the Samurai warriors saw them as warrior spirits of agility, power and victory, in battle to be copied. In China, they were a good-luck symbol of prosperity, harmony and fortune in a successful standard for life. For Native Americans, they were totems for both speed and versatility in predatory flight and a spirit of the beneficial wind that blew in their favor.

Since the coming of the coronavirus in our lives, we have had to take a closer look into the natural conditions of our environment. Septic Regulation Passes; Hoffer Voted into Chair

Marion Board of Health

By Mick Colageo

When N. Douglas Schneider represented homeowners Douglas and Martha Lally before the Marion Board of Health in a public hearing Tuesday afternoon, the board had an immediate opportunity to act on the newly passed regulation requiring the denitrification upgrade to failing septic systems.

The variance requested for 17 Indian Cove Road by Schneider, Davignon, and Leone was to reduce two things: the depth required above the water table from four to two feet and the new septic tank capacity from the required 2,000 gallons to 1,500 as recommended by the installer.

Schneider told the board that Douglas and Martha Lally bought their home 10 years ago and that their septic system needs a replacement. They had already opted to install a denitrification system that happens to allow for a two-foot reduction in the distance above the water table under DEP approvals.

"Given the active family there, it would significantly help their lifestyle if we didn't have to build a big mound in the front yard," said Schneider.

Board of Health Clerk Dot Brown said, "I was glad that we weren't approving (a new septic system) that didn't have (denitrification)." Brown did ask of the smaller tank is better off being pumped every two years.

Marion Health Director Dave Flaherty said that the new system being installed at 17 Indian Cove Road needs more bugs to denitrify so, unless it requires pumping, it's better off being left alone to enhance its abilities.

The variance was approved unanimously, and this immediately after the Board of Health had passed the new regulation, also with a unanimous vote.

While keeping the window open for public comments, Brown reported to the board that by June 30 the board had received 21 comments altogether, 16 in full support of the new regulation, and in enacting it as soon as possible. Five others articulated questions and concerns.

One of those concerns was that residents would like to see a whole septic plan, "which we agree with," said Brown. Another concern was from first-time home buyers.

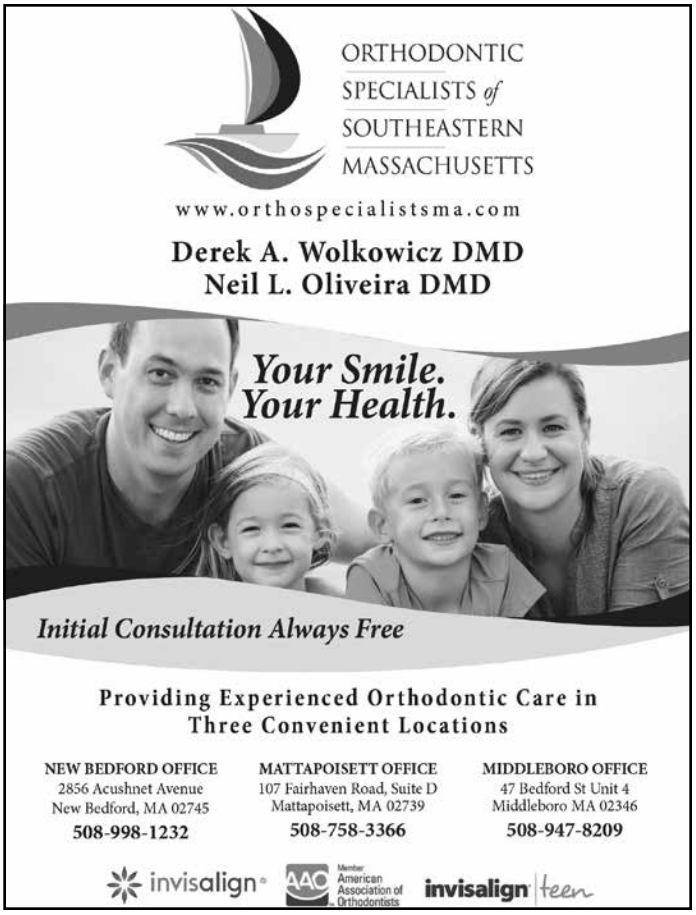

Brown emphasized that the proposed septic system is required only at the point of fail and is not intended to affect every septic system in Marion. The new regulation is a better value than a current Title 5 system, she said, because of 20 years allowed before being required to connect to the town's sewer system.

"An awful lot of hard work was involved there, I appreciate it," said Board of Health Chairman John Howard.

Board Vice Chairman Dr. Ed Hoffer said that a couple of responders were clearly cons, not questions. "Two engaged the regulations, at least two we have to put down as being negative," he said.

Howard said he spoke to both dissenters directly.

"The interesting thing about the money is we've actually missed out on the opportunity to get other people's money because we weren't in a place to be ready for it," said Brown.

Hoffer pointed out that residents hooked to the town's sewer system are paying more. "This is not a free ride," he said, "you are paying heavily for it."

One live-caller noted the cost of a new denitrification system to be approximately $30,000 and asked if a homeowner with a working Title 5 system but also with a failing leach field it should be a $10,000 cost so why not offer such an upgrade rather than require a $30,000 purchase for all new equipment.

Time expired on the public hearing and the board voted to close the hearing and then voted unanimously to immediately adopt the new regulation numbered 4.180 in the Marion Board of Health regulations and titled "Septic Systems DeNitrification Regulations."

The board briefly discussed the resignation of Public Health Nurse Kathy Downey effective August 19. "You will be missed; you have been a real rock during our coronavirus crisis," said Hoffer. Brown and Howard concurred.

The Board of Health also voted to reorganize on Tuesday, and Howard, Brown and Hoffer switched chairs. Hoffer is the new chairperson, Brown the new vice-chairperson, and Howard the new clerk.

Downey and Health Director Dave Flaherty talked to the board at length about issues ongoing, some relating to the coronavirus and some relating to tick-borne diseases.

Downey reported that EEE messaging has started and that there have been nine tick-borne-illness cases in the last two weeks. All positive tests were also tested for COVID-19, she said.

The matter of establishing volunteers from Medical Reserve Corps versus Community Emergency Response Team (CERT) was discussed, along with preparations in the event of negotiating with a hotel to isolate those who test positive for COVID-19.

Flaherty reported that there have been no closures due to mosquitoes and that yard sprays are free from Plymouth County by calling 781-585-5450.

There have been complaints at the local beaches due to observed lack of distancing, facemasks and the usage of alcohol.

On a more positive note, Flaherty reported that the Kittansett (golf) Club and Beverly Yacht Club have their houses in order for summer events.

The next meeting of the Marion Board of Health was not announced.

2020 Keel Awards

The Wanderer is pleased to announce that we are soliciting nominations for our 27th annual "Wanderer Keel Awards." The yearly community service honor, presented to one Tri-Town resident from each of the three central towns in our circulation area, will be announced in our July 30 edition, and each winner will be the subject of a short feature highlighting his/her contributions to the local community. But The Wanderer needs your help in selecting these "unsung heroes."

The requirements are simple. Nominees must be legal residents for at least five years of Mattapoisett, Marion or Rochester, and must have contributed in some way to the overall benefit of the community – directly to town residents, indirectly through efforts in promoting town activities or working to keep the wheels of local government well oiled. The only restriction is that these persons cannot benefit from their efforts in any other way – either financially or politically (hence, sitting elected officials are not eligible).

In doing this, we hope to applaud those who are rarely recognized for their countless hours of service and focus on the many people behind the scenes who remain otherwise anonymous, but who provide crucial support to many town functions.

Like the keel of a ship that keeps the vessel from capsizing, the recipients of the Annual Wanderer Keel Award will be recognized for their stalwart efforts in keeping the community on an "even keel."

Past recipients of this honor include:

– MARION: Claire Russell (1994); Ralph and Phyllis Washburn (1995); Annie Giberti (1996); Jay Crowley (1997); Tyler Blethen (1998); Olive E. Harris (1999, posthumously); Kathleen P. The views expressed in the "Letters to the Editor" column are not necessarily those of The Wanderer, its staff or advertisers. To the Editor;

The leadership team of Tri-Town Against Racism (TTAR) is grateful to the residents of Marion, Mattapoisett, and Rochester who have shown us such overwhelming love and support by trusting us with their stories, donating funds, and the many, many book donations. It may appear that not much is happening at this time, but be assured that we are diligently at work building a strong organizational structure that will allow us to continue to grow in a manageable fashion. Our membership currently stands at 942 and growing.

Tri-Town Against Racism strongly believes that Black lives matter, however it is important to note that we are not a Black Lives Matter organization. We are a local group who's sole purpose is to create an actively anti-racist community here in the Tri-Town. We would like to note that there is another group in our community that began after TTAR was formed, they have a similar name, which has caused some confusion. There was some discussion to merge these two groups, but it was mutually determined that was not feasible due to some fundamental differences. Community members should feel free to join both groups, but please be aware that we are Tri-Town Against Racism.

As we continue to organize and build our community, please be sure to check our Tri-Town Against Racism Facebook page. Our Cape Verdean History and Culture sub-committee is posting weekly, so we can all learn more about our area's rich Cape Verdean history. We have several other initiatives in the works which will be rolling out in the near future. Keep an eye on our page for "Call to Action" posts which will give our members ways to engage in the important work we are doing.

Sincerely,
Your TTAR Leadership Team

From the Files of the Rochester Historical Society

By Connie Eshbach

Today 28 Marion Road in Rochester is a vacant lot, but for many years the buildings there were popular gathering spots. In 1710, the lot held a barn and stable for Ruggles Tavern. There were businesses here from then until a fire in July of 2011 destroyed the bakery, café and apartments located there.

In 1976, there was a general store that had been expanded to include a lunch counter and grill and had become known as Alice's Kitchen. In this new configuration, it was as much a local gathering spot as the revolutionary tavern had been. In 1976, a reporter from the Boston Globe stopped by to do a story about the longevity of a spot where people had congregated for over 250 years to discuss everything from gossip to politics over coffee, lunch, or apple pie. A few of the patrons there that day were regulars: George Church, Eddie Lopes, and Buster Locke.

They regaled the reporter with the story of Bathsheba Ruggles Spooner, the daughter of Timothy Ruggles, Jr., the staunch Tory. Bathsheba had followed her father's wishes and married Mr. Spooner, also a Tory. While her husband was away, Bathsheba found herself nursing a wounded Continental soldier back to health and the two fell in love and wished to be together. When her husband returned, she conspired with two henchmen to murder him. To hide the body, they put it down a well shaft. True love did not work out, Bathsheba and both co-conspirators were caught and hanged in 1778. Bathsheba was the last woman to be hanged in Massachusetts.

that the residents of Marion can understand more about its unique historical architecture.

This week we feature 604A Point Road. The clapboard-clad Colonial Revival residence at 604A Point Road was built in 1930. The home was designed by the architect Charles Allerton Coolidge for his own family. He was a partner in the Boston architectural firm of Shipley, Bulfinch, Rutan and Coolidge, successors to the practice of Henry Hobson Richardson. This lovely home overlooks rolling lawns, while there is a wooded area behind it.

Sippican Historical Society Museum Reopening

The Museum of the Sippican Historical Society at 141 Front Street, directly across from the Marion General Store, is reopening on Saturday, July 11 from 9:00 am to 1:00 pm. Lemonade will be served in the Memorial Garden on Main Street, just behind the Sippican Historical Society Building. Visitors are required to wear masks, and there will be a limit of eight visitors at a time in the museum.

Our museum exhibits currently focus on two of the most significant periods of the town's history: the seafaring era and the rise of tourism in Marion's Golden Age. In the Maritime Room, you can learn about Marion's long connection to the sea, and see some of the tools and documents used in over two centuries of marine commerce in southeast New England. The Mary Celeste Room tells the story of the famous 'ghost ship', whose captain hailed from Marion. Finally, the Converse Room displays painting, furniture, and artifacts related to the rise of tourism and the development of the village as a summer community.

Beginning July 14, the museum will also be open on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 11:00 am to 1:00 pm. We look forward to seeing you there.

Movie Review

Old and In the Way

By Rob Gonsalves
www.robsmovievault.com

Force of Nature.* Starring Mel Gibson and Emile Hirsch. Directed by Michael Polish. Running time: 91 minutes. MPAA rating: R. Now available on streaming and physical home media.

Its critical reputation as a racist thriller is a little overstated, but Force of Nature is still ten pounds of crap in a five-pound bag. This is a movie whose handling of a major character's death is so feeble — a twitching eyelid visible to the camera — we expect the supposed corpse to pop up later on, perhaps to save a loved one at the last minute. That's about the only cliché we're spared in a film wherein even the bad guy comments on the clichés. Filmed in San Juan, Puerto Rico, Force of Nature unfolds during a hurricane, though it doesn't actually need to; the hurricane really only explains why two cops show up at an apartment building to evacuate some recalcitrant tenants, only to be caught in the middle of an art heist by some armed and deadly robbers led by a guy calling himself John the Baptist.

I would like to welcome the Peruvian actor Stephanie Cayo to English-speaking films. She plays Jess, a cop trying to make a name on the San Juan force. Cayo looks all the better next to the essenceless Emile Hirsch as her cop partner, the burned-out, lackadaisical Cardillo. These two go to the apartment building and try to extricate an old German man and a retired, sickly cop, played by Mel Gibson, whose very presence in a film at this point would attract hostile skepticism no matter what the film is. Gibson is (or has been; he seems to have behaved in recent years, from what we've heard anyway) a terrible person, but he still has the spark of a true movie star, and so does Stephanie Cayo; their brief scenes together illustrate what this bland movie could have been.

Force of Nature would like to be the sort of invincible thriller, like Die Hard, whose every odd bit of business pays off later. I have to wonder if the screenwriter, Cory Miller, wrote this whole thing around a scene involving the bad guy, who dons a police uniform in order to get away, and something behind a multi-locked door in someone's apartment. There's a whole scene dealing with meat and a guy buying all of it at the supermarket, and a bit of planted information that you definitely don't want to enter that locked room if you're wearing a cop outfit, and so when John the Baptist forces Cardillo to swap clothes with him, all the pieces fall into place but seem stupid anyway — and then the movie cuts away before we can see the one hilariously brutal thing we've been spending half the idiotic film waiting to see.

Director Michael Polish started off in the late '90s as a Sundance-blessed indie director, but now he seems to make films just to cast his wife, Kate Bosworth — this is their fourth film together, and probably their worst. Bosworth plays Gibson's daughter, who is also a doctor, and who can also hold her breath long enough to get her and a wounded man out of a submerged room. (We never see them find their way out; she turns up fine later, like almost everyone else, and fairly chipper despite what we've seen her go through.) Force of Nature's mixed review of the thin blue line — cops may be mean and corrupt but still get the brutal job done — is accidentally poorly-timed at this cultural/political moment, but it's no more consciously racist than a hundred action thrillers from the '80s. It's meant, I think, to be a throwback to those films, and to an era where Mel Gibson was still on top, but it lacks the snap and pizzazz to close the deal. It may speak well of Michael Polish's character that he tries to make a retro, obliviously racist thriller and fails. But the failure still reads to us as a wasted hour and a half.

Mattapoisett Boatyard set up their 40′ mooring barge with 50′ crane to display a 30′ x 50′ American flag in the middle of Mattapoisett harbor. The flag was supplied by Richard DeMello who owns Bete-Fleming in Mattapoisett. He was thrilled we could make this happen. Ned Kaiser of Mattapoisett Boatyard conjured up the idea a few days prior thinking this would be a great way for us to give back and display the U.S. flag boldly and with pride for all to enjoy and appreciate. SALOME'S STARS

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although you don't like to change plans once they're set, once again, you might find that doing so can make a big difference in your favor. Family matters dominate the weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You continue to get encouragement for your proposals, including some support from unlikely sources. Use this positive flow to move forward with your plans. Good luck.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Family matters are dominant this week. It's a good time to be with those you love. It's also a good time to contact loved ones with whom you've lost touch.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Be careful not to allow differences of opinion to create unpleasant feelings, especially in the workplace. A neutral observer could check out the situation and suggest a resolution.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) While the Lion's Den is the center of attention this week, with family matters dominating much of your time, workplace issues are also important. Try to find a balance between them.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The future of a new relationship could depend on how much the usually impatient-to-get-things-done Virgo is willing to stop pushing and let things happen naturally.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Worry over a loved one's well-being is eased with good news from a sympathetic source. Your continued show of love and support is important. Stay with it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good time to consider mending fences with someone you wish was back in your life. Forget about blame, and focus on the good things you once shared.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is a good week to start researching information regarding whatever changes you're considering, whether it involves a new home, a new location or a new job.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A long-anticipated job opportunity could turn out to be less than you expected. But appearances might be deceiving. Check it out before you decide it's not for you.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Good news: Adapting to a new situation might come more easily than you expected. You can look for continued support from colleagues who appreciate your contributions.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Someone you care for might need more reassurance from the typically "unemotional" Pisces. Go ahead. Open up, and you might be surprised at what you find when you do.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are a romantic at heart, although you can be amazingly practical when you need to be.

New Bedford Whaling Museum Plans for Reopening

On Thursday, July 9, the New Bedford Whaling Museum plans to reopen its doors to visitors after being closed since mid-March. The first two weeks of its opening will be reserved for members only and the Museum plans to open up to the entire public on July 23.

The team has also been preparing its campus to welcome back visitors for a re-imagined museum experience. The hours of operation will be 10:00 am to 4:00 pm, Thursday through Sunday only. Masks are mandatory for admittance and adherence to social distancing.

In addition to around-the-clock cleaning and disinfecting routines, the Museum has installed UV air purification systems throughout the building, which reduce the spread of viruses and bacteria in the air and on surfaces.

A newly designed path through the Museum has been designed to allow the most space possible for visitors to social distance throughout their visit. Structural changes to the Museum's entrance and exit are complete, and protective plexiglass shields have been installed at key locations. Hand sanitizer stations are located throughout the Museum as well.

"As a place that ignites learning and welcomes the community, we are eager to play our role in this particular moment when we all need to feel a little bit of normalcy," said Amanda D. McMullen, President, and CEO. "Because of the significant financial impact that COVID has had on our community, during our re-opening phase we have decided to offer admission to the Museum on a pay-what-you-can model, ensuring that everyone can have the opportunity to take a break and enjoy our galleries."

The Museum has instituted a timed, online reservation system to reduce the traffic flow and time spent in line, and the maximum capacity is set at 125 people (25 percent of its total capacity).

Though the campus has been closed to the public, the staff has been busy creating digital activities and hosting virtual programs that will continue into the foreseeable future.

The Museum is monitoring the public health data available, as well as following the guidance set forth by state and local leaders, and it will open its doors when it is both safe and recommended to do so. Therefore, reopening dates may shift depending on the information made available.

Summer Reading Kick Off Concert with Tom Sieling

Our first ever virtual concert available through July 21, Tom Sieling has taped a special version of his interactive concert "Tromp through the Swamp" with lively music and lots of motivation to participate. Visit our website at mattapoisettlibrary.org or our Facebook page and find information on how to join in the fun.

"Tom has delighted tens of thousands in over thirty years of performing - 57 Summer Reading programs in 2019. Every show is a top-ten lineup of most fun, participatory kids' songs out there - many are even a bit athletic. He accompanies himself on guitar, banjo, and harmonica, and adds a drum machine to keep things upbeat and easy to move to. In keeping with the 'Imagine Your Story' theme, the kids' imaginations are engaged throughout, along with lots of encouragement of the kids' lifelong participation in music, reading, and library usage. For summer 2020, the programs are recorded at 'Owl's Nest Studio' - out in the Finger Lakes woods behind Tom's house."

This Summer Reading Program is possible with funds from the Friends of the Mattapoisett Free Public Library. For more information on upcoming children's programs, please visit our website at www.mattapoisettlibrary.org/childrens or like us on Facebook.

Summer Programs at Plumb Library – Imagine Your Story!

Join us for a fun summer of fantasy, fairy tales, and mythology! Just think "SLP" - Sign-Up, Log, Participate!

To sign-up, email the library at info@plumblibrary.com, or give the Library a call at 508-763-8600. Then, start reading and completing challenges through August 8. Yes, listening to audio books, reading to others, or being read to all count as reading! There will be prizes earned for participation in certain activities and for completing a log by August 8. You have to be signed-up to be eligible for prizes.

All ages are welcome to participate! There are many activities which youth (and adults) can do independently, while others can be done with a grown-up or together with family. You are also welcome to use logs to accomplish your own summer goals. We just ask that this includes daily reading, brain-building activities, and outdoor experiences.

This year, links for bingo cards, challenge checklists, and logs can be found below under "Links for Printouts" on the Summer Library Program page on our website (plumblibrary.com), so you can print them from your own home. If you cannot print them, please call the library to have a set printed for you.

There will be no in-house library programs due to pandemic restrictions. Visit the Event Calendar on the Plumb Library website to find information on Zoom Story Times, Book Talks (for RMS students only), Bedtime Stories and Stretch with Plumbelina, programs by the Science Tellers for Preschool and for grades K-5, Ed the Wizard celebrates Harry Potter's Birthday, and the ever-popular Scrambled Word and Find Gnomeo, and more virtual or community programs.

For more information, email info@plumblibrary.org, or call the library at 508-763-8600.

Mattapoisett Recreation Cancels Summer Programming

After extensive meetings with Town Administrator Michael Lorenco and Board of Health agent Kayla Davis, the Mattapoisett Recreation Department announced that they will not be running their Seahorse Explorer summer camp program and all other summer programming due to COVID-19 pandemic concerns. Greta Fox, Recreation Director for the Town of Mattapoisett, sited that due to lack of a definitive start date and protocols/guidelines from the state, that it is not feasible to plan programs and implement training and changes that would be necessary at this time. "We are extremely disappointed (that) we will not be able to offer our scheduled programs. This decision was made, as always, with the safety of our children and their families in mind." Mattapoisett Recreation will continue to monitor the situation and hopes to get programs up and running as soon as protocols and safety allow.

Lions Cancel Harbor Days

In 1983, Harbor Days was conceived by then club President Arthur Blackburn. Who would have guessed that almost 40 years later, the term "Harbor Days" would represent a week's worth of events that would be something akin to a major holiday (in this part of the world, anyway!) This special week each July includes the Triathlon, Shopping at Shipyard, Paint Nights, local talent, entertainment, the famous strawberry shortcakes, lobster dinner, fish fry, pancake breakfast, silent auction, You Pick 'Em raffle, Grand raffle, and, of course, the arts and crafts fair.

And who would have guessed that 2020 would bring a pandemic that would change life as we previously knew it to be? Sadly, life may not be the way it was for quite a while. With that, and after much consideration and deliberation, it is with heavy hearts that Mattapoisett Lions Club's Board of Directors has voted to cancel all Harbor Days 2020 events. This is a decision that was not reached quickly or easily. We hope you understand the desire to keep everyone's safety and well-being first and foremost in our minds.

We will look forward to planning Harbor Days 2021 and seeing you all at Shipyard Park once again, enjoying all that Harbor Days has to offer.

Our sincere thanks to each and every person who continues to support our club's mission to help local residents in need, provide scholarships to local students, promote diabetes awareness, and make donations to Massachusetts Lions Eye Research. We could not do any of this work without you.
